Reference for Anna Valenti

To whom it may concern,

I am pleased to recommend Anna Valenti for any senior Product Growth or Product Operations role. At Studocu, Anna has made a valuable contribution to our AI product work, helping students discover our study tools and reach the material that helps them prepare for their studies.

Her work has included launching Studocu's first podcast program, taking it from an idea to branded shows published on Spotify, Apple Podcasts and YouTube, alongside distribution and measurement work on Course Companion, our largest AI product initiative. She worked closely with engineers, analysts, designers and our legal and marketing teams to define what we would build, review the results and agree on next steps.

Anna brings an analytical and notably independent approach to product decisions. She interrogates the data behind an experiment rather than accepting the headline, and she is willing to say when a result does not mean what people hope it means. She is comfortable owning an ambiguous brief from end to end, moves quickly without losing the detail, and leaves her work documented well enough for a colleague to pick up.

I have valued Anna's contribution and am happy to recommend her. Her departure is the result of a company reorganisation and is unrelated to her performance. I thank her for her work at Studocu and wish her every success in her next role.

Yours sincerely,

Tyler Kirkland
